City council considers limited-funds budget

By Don Green

The Upland City Council this week took its first look at budget figures for the coming fiscal year and some of the tough choices that could be facing the city after voting June 6 on the Jarvis - Gann property tax limitation initiative.

Figures showed the city could face making up a budget deficit of just over $300,000 even after following a variety of service cutbacks, one - time savings, equipment reductions and fund transfers outlined for the most severe interpretation of Proposition 13's potential impact.

Council members took no action Monday night during the information session, but heard Finance Director Anthony Andrade summarize four alternative revenue projections for fiscal 1978-79 beginning July 1.

Andrade and the council reviewed budget figures covering four possibilities, including a normal budget year in the unlikely event California voters reject both ballot forms of property tax relief.

The second alternative could be applied if the state legislature's form of property tax relief becomes law. Proposition 8 coupled with SB 1 (the Behr bill) would go into effect if the proposition passes and Proposition 13, the Jarvis - Gann constitutional amendment, is defeated.

City staff prepared the other two sets of figures in event Proposition 13 becomes law. Under the so-called "high Jarvis" budget, the city would receive a share of remaining property tax collected by the county and distributed according to state law yet to be enacted.

The ''low Jarvis'' budget envisions more severe revenue loss by assuming Upland and other cities would not qualify as "districts" eligible to receive property taxes under the language of Proposition

Such an interpretation would eliminate city property tax revenue to be generated next fiscal year.

City administrators meeting at the annual two - day budget retreat last month ironed out ways to present the council with a balanced budget in every event unless Proposition 13 becomes law and its application leaves Upland without property tax dollars.

Councilwoman Ina Petokas — who presided over the meeting Monday as chairwoman of the council's finance and budget committee — said elimination of all property tax revenue is likely if the Jarvis - Gann initiative passes.

She noted the Los Angeles Unified School District has a contingency plan to file a suit that would preclude Los Angeles County cities from receiving remaining property taxes.

A similar suit could affect Upland and San Bernardino County cities, she indicated.

The Jarvis - Gann initiative would limit property tax to 1 percent of the full cash value of property as of the 1975-76 assessments.

A staff report submitted to the council shows the city receiving $2.78 million in property taxes in its $9.96 million budget this fiscal year.

Revised figures after the budget retreat show $3.32 million in property tax in a $13.06 million "normal" budget for 1978-79; $3.01 million in property tax in a $12.82 million "Behr" budget; $1.35 million in property tax in a $11.69 million "high Jarvis" budget and $45,000 (late payments) in property tax in a $10.94 million "low Jarvis" budget

While the council did not discuss suggested cutbacks in depth, Mrs. Petokas said after the meeting several could be considered "controversial."

Among the possibilities if the Jarvis - Gann initiative passes were:

— Delay in hiring four police officers.

- Elimination of proposed city salary increases.

Elimination of street cleaning and sidewalk maintenance, along with tree trimming in the case of "low Jarvis."

Doubling of the business license fee and increases for various engineering and planning checks.

Contracting with the Humane Society of the Chaffey Community for animal control, eliminating the city service, under "low Jarvis."

— Reduction in library hours from the current 64.5 to 40 hours a week ('high Jarvis'') or 28 hours ('low Jarvis''). The library would also cut the number of volumes purchased and periodical subscriptions renewed in this suggestion.

 Increasing fees for recreation programs and elimination of $22,499 worth of programs. Organizations using playing fields would be responsible for maintaining them.

City Manager Lee Travers said another possibility would be to keep city hall open only four hours a day to the public

Andrade said the city has no way of knowing yet what its revenue would be under the Jarvis - Gann initiative, but added the state could supplement localities with its surplus.

The City Council will hold a further review of its budget options 7 p.m. May 25 at city hall, 460 N. Euclid Ave.

National board delays decision on crash cause

The National Transportation and Safety Board has continued consideration until Tuesday for d determining probable cause of the plane crash last June in Upland that killed all five persons on board.

Bob Spermo of the safety board's information systems in Washington, D.C., said this week the board continued review of the Upland crash when the accident first came before the board May 1.

He noted the five members of the independent federal agency determine probable causes separately in their individual offices before announcing their joint findings.

This procedure is being used the Upland crash and most of the some 300 aviation accidents before the board for review. Spermo said.

Only for the most major crashes do the five members meet as a group to discuss the case before finding probable cause, he added.

An Upland anthropologist says that contrary to popular conception stone - age life was not always a constant struggle to find enough food for survival.

Dr. Sheryl Miller, associate professor of anthropology at Pitzer College, reported some inhabitants of Kenya, Africa, more than 5,000 years ago lived among a "giant cafeteria" of wild game and plants.

The Upland resident made her sixth trip to Africa last August and September and led a team of five Californians excavating a site about an hour's drive from Nairobi, Kenya's capital.

She said last week she is continuing the long process of correlating data from the site that will enable her to learn more about these relatively recent stone - age inhabitants.

Her study of stone - age peoples has previously taken her to Zambia, Angola, Zaire, Ethiopia, and Mauritania.

Miller defined stone - age people as those who do not produce food, but live off the land, hunting and gathering nuts, berries or other types of vegetation.

She said she is awaiting carbon 14 dating analysis that will help pinpoint the age of bone remains dug up by the anthropological team.

Comparable artifacts from nearby sites date back 17,000 years,

Miller said.
From the evidence she has examined so far, Miller said the inhabitants, perhaps a group of about 30, were hunters and gatherers.

She noted the findings hint that their life style may have resembled that of the Bushmen of the Kalahari Desert in southwestern Africa.

The Bushmen continued to live entirely off the land until about a decade ago, Miller commented.

She noted the area of Kenyan site continues to be rich in resources — soil, water, vegetation and animals. Miller said anthropologists studying the recent stone age take clues from present - day conditions in choosing spots for excavation where stone age peoples were likely to live. Miller compared her work to that

Miller compared her work to that of a detective, looking for clues and examining bits and pieces so that she can make associations between objects found and know something about the life of these people.

She added that analyzing all the data compiled in Kenya will probably take two years, when she will write a paper on the findings.

Miller brought back a variety of rocks used as tools by these stone age inhabitants. Rocks with edges were used as scrappers to skin animals for clothing or perhaps tents, she said.

The edges, she explained, were shaped by flaking in a regular fashion so that the stone would not have projections that could shred the clothes.

Obsidian, one of the hardest rocks known, was among the stones used as scrappers, Miller said.

She said she envisions these stone age people using an ancient form of cost - benefit analysis in choosing the purpose for particular stones' use as tools.

Larger, sturdy rocks — such as pieces of quartz — used for pounding were plentiful in the hills where they lived, she said. However, these early inhabitants of Kenya might travel one - three miles from home to find proper microcrystal silica stones that were both sturdy and could be flaked into a regular edge for scraping Miller explained.

She said they probably wasted no time finding pounding tools.

Such rocks were used to crush the bones of the animals killed for food and the stone - age people ate the marrow, a nutritious part of animals usually overlooked by Americans, Miller said.

She explained that the California team found crushed bones from animals lying in circles of about 2½ feet in diameter. The circles suggest a cooperative effort of six-eight persons sitting together, she added.

This could have been a time when

This could have been a time when the inhabitants exhanged stories or spoke of their religion or myths, Miller said. However, she added that the team found no surviving symbols that could provide clues to their beliefs.

Because the land was rich and game abundant, Miller estimated the stone - age people had to spend only three days a week "making a living."

They could sit on a billside and see

They could sit on a hillside and see all the animals for several miles, she commented, adding the inhabitants could pick their preferences, typically large ungulates such as the wildebeest and gnu.

They hunted with bows and arrows, which were barbed, Miller said. She added this was the appropriate weapon, rather than spears, for their open country.

The arrows may have been dipped in poison, a technique still used by the Bushmen of the Kalahari, Miller related.

What did these stone - age people do with the rest of their time since obtaining food required relatively little effort? What happened to this group of 30 that may date back some 17,000 years?

Miller said these are among the questions she faces as an anthropologist.

She said the remains at the site.

She said the remains at the site offer few clues on how the inhabitants spent their days when not hunting or gathering. They at least had the opportunity to develop religion, folklore, myths and some kind of music and dance.

Miller explained that perhaps the group was introduced to the domesticating of animals by neighboring peoples and gradually shifted life styles, relying more and more on producing their own food.

She noted the stone - age people could take shelter from the weather or danger in the rocks of the hillside.

Dear R.M.G.:

Your type of back pain is a common complaint we hear from our patients and can prove to be a real problem is it is related to your spine and is not properly treated.

Next time you are at the kitchen counter, I suggest you stand on a foam cushion which will help to cushion you against the hard floor. Prolonged standing has proved to be a problem in all lines of work and particularly in industry. In the past, industrial leaders have boards that act as shock absorbers Some companies put rubber or vinyl mats on the floor beside machinery or work benches and many new commercial buildings are using special floor surfaces to accomplish the same purpose.

Based on your symptoms, you may have a structural problem that deserves professional attention. I would suggest that you arrange for a thorough Chiropractic examination to determine if this is indeed the case.

Omnitrans seeks loans to operate bus system

In the aftermath of a related suit that eventually was settled out of court, San Bernardino County's transportation planning board agreed to expand services for the elderly and handicapped over the next five

The plan will cost $1.6 million countywide in its first year alone. It will cost five West Valley cities and the county an estimated $335,775 for the year starting July 1.

Local governments are expected to pay for that by setting aside larger shares of the income they receive from state sales taxes on gasoline. That means they will have less to spend for road construction

County board okays more transportation

By PETER WONG

Omnitrans directors decided last week to ask for loans totaling $900,000 to keep the bus system operating while the agency awaits the federal subsidies it has applied

The requests will be made to the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors and the San Bernardino City Council, both of which loaned Omnitrans $350,000 each last year to help it through a similar situation. Those loans have since been repaid.

Those two governments were chosen because they have the largest investment in Omnitrans equipment and facilities - nearly two-thirds of the total.

In last year's situation, other member governments of Omnitrans were asked to loan a total of $1.75 million. Most ultimately agreed to loan the money.

Omnitrans expected to receive the federal money it depends upon to pay a major share of its operating costs by May 15, Omnitrans General Manager Paul Marsh told the board of directors But officials in the federal Urban Transportation Administration have said it will take six to eight more weeks before Omnitrans' grant can be approved and three weeks after that before Omnitrans can actually receive the

- State transportation funds of local governments. The money comes from state sales taxes on gasoline. Omnitrans members - 11 of the county's 15 cities and the county itself - spend part of the money for public transportation and the rest for road construction and maintenance Supervisor Robert L. Hammock of San Bernardino, this year's president of the Omnitrans board, reported "some grumbling" among the other supervisors about Omnitrans' recurring cash-flow

Hammock was referring to some comments made earlier last week as the supervisors routinely authorized the Southern California Association of Governments to release county money for Omnitrans payments. At that time, Supervisor Dennis L. Hansberger of Yucaipa complained, "Last time we did this, we said we wouldn't do this again. I don't want to penalize the system simply because people who should have solved it didn't solve the problem." However, Omnitrans had not requested a loan from the supervisors when Hansberger made his comment.

Chino Mayor Pro Tem Eileen Carter, noting this is the second time Omnitrans has been forced to seek loans.

Marsh blamed the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for its slowness in handling applications from Omnitrans and other public transportation agencies.

Because of a recent reorganization, Marsh said, those applications will be processed and cleared by the federal agency's new regional office in San Francisco, rather than by the Washington headquarters.

Marsh said half of the interest Omnitrans must pay on the loans will be reimbursed by the federal government because "it is an operating expense.

The plan's cost to West Valley cities and the county over the five years is estimated at $2.6 million.

The plan was approved by the executive board of the San Associated Bernardino Governments as its response to meeting the special transportation needs of the elderly and handicapped in San Bernardino

Last year, the board was named in a court action that charged transportation planning agencies with failing to meet "unmet needs" in public transportation while diverting $4.4 million to San Bernardino County and its cities for road construction.

That dispute was settled out of court when the board agreed to expand some transportation services to the elderly and handicapped on a temporary basis.

That cost an estimated $160,000. Shortly beforehand, the board hired a consultant (De Leuw, Cather and Co.) to prepare a five-year plan for meeting those special needs. The board has held a series of workshops over the past several months to develop that plan.

Features of the adopted plan

Consideration of changes in bus routes to make it easier for the elderly and handicapped to reach centers of activity.

Modification of buses, such as the addition of extra handrails, lower steps and reserved seats. Fifteen buses will be modified in the Acquisition of three buses with wheelchair lifts. Eventually, almost all buses will have lifts. Increased Dial-A-Ride service five years. - Service to points in Pomona and

Claremont, across the county line. - More Dial-A-Ride cars, with a goal of 12 for West Valley service and four for intercounty service in five years

Much of the discussion centered around whether the five-year plan will commit the cities and county to heavy spending.

"The plan represents our best judgment of the likely (transportation) requirements for the next five years," Bill Dietrich of De Leuw, Cather said.

Grand jury criticizes supervisors' pay measure

Criticizing it as too generous, a grand jury committee says it will urge voters to reject a proposal that would regulate future pay increases for county supervisors The proposal is known as Measure A on the June 6 primary ballot. As an amendment to the county charter, it requires a majority for

Although the measure would take away the unrestricted authority supervisors now have to vote themselves pay raises, it would continue to leave them with the final salary-setting responsibility.

This amendment implies a limitation of salary increases to be controlled by future grand juries,' committee said in a statement issued over the weekend

"The use of the grand jury to monitor the proper application of a formula scarcely represents a strict limitation of board of supervisors' salaries. Therefore, we recommend a 'no' vote on Measure A.

The formula the grand jury committee refers to is as follows:

- In odd-numbered years, the supervisors could vote themselves a maximum pay raise of 7 percent or the annual change in the local Consumer Price Index, whichever is lower. The raise could be voted only after a grand jury review.

- In even-numbered years starting in 1980, the grand jury would supervisors' salaries, based on several factors. It then would make its recommendation to the super-

- If the supervisors want a pay raise greater than the grand jury's recommendation, or if the proposed raise were greater than 12 percent, four county supervisors and a majority of the county's voters would have to approve it.

"At the end of five years, if this formula is applied, the 'compounding effect' could result in a base pay of $36,113 plus ... fringe benefits," the grand jury committee

A supervisor's salary is now $24,-844. The grand jury pointed out, benefits amounting to 30.29 percent of the salary, or $7,525

"It must be noted that these fringe benefits can be increased at the will of the board of supervisors." it said

The supervisors put the measure on the hallot in hopes its passage will finally resolve the controversy over how their salaries should be

They have taken a political beating on this issue ever since they attempted to vote themselves a pay increase of nearly 40 percent almost two years ago. That would have raised their pay from $21,612 to $30,-178, then the salary of the lowest paid elected department head.

their latest pay raise, from $22,998 to $24,844.

The West End's two county supervisors did not learn of the grand jury committee statement until Monday

Both Chairman Robert O. Townsend of Chino and Supervisor Joseph Kamansky of Upland chose not to criticize the grand jury's statement directly.

If the grand jury chooses to oppose Measure A, "that's certainly their prerogative," Townsend said Monday night.

You see the difference between last year and this?" Kamansky asked rhetorically

'Last year's grand jury told us to we're not paid enough. This year's grand jury says we did wrong and we're paid too much. What about next year?'

(Last year's grand jury recommended two raises - an 8 percent increase that would bring supervisors' salaries to the average of those in five other Southern California counties, and a so-called cost-of-living increase amounting to 5.3 percent. The supervisors voted themselves only the first one.)

Both Townsend and Kamansky are up for election this year.

Kamansky was appointed to succeed Supervisor Daniel D. Mikesell, who resigned because of ill health.

College expects $40,000 loss in state funds

Chaffey College is anticipating a loss of more than $40, 000 in state money this year because of declining enrollment at the college.

The board of trustees in a special meeting this morning heard a report from Bob Totten, assistant superintendent of business services, that outlined the college enrollment figures as of March 31.

The board was also given a preview of an administrative reorganization plan that is expected to save the college $225,000 over the next two years.

Overall the college saw an increase in students, but because the increase did not match projected figures, Totten said the college could anticipate a loss of $40,690 in state apportionment money this year.

The college based its 1977-78 budget on an enrollment increase of 300 students, but only 242 new students enroll-

Non-credit class attendance increased by almost 703 students, but credit classes fell behind last year's figures by 468 students and summer school classes received only eight new students, Totten said.

This year's budget will still come up short in the certificated salary division, which was previously $300,000 short, Totten said. He did not say what the deficit is currently, but noted there have been "underexpen-ditures" in the capital outlay account to make up for it. Totten said the college could expect to start next year's budget with a reserve of about $761,000. He said the reserve would have been $1,036,000 but a boardauthorized expenditure of $100,000 for a center in the Corona-Norco area and transfers to the community services capital outlay account reduced the original figure.

Totten was questioned by Dr. Lester Stroh, board president, at how the figure of 300 new students was determined.

Totten indicated it was a "negotiated" figure that had Recently appointed interim Superintendent-President Dr. James Catanzaro told the board the new student figure for next year would be arrived at "very conservatively" to eliminate budget problems for next year. He added it is "very difficult" to estimate what the numbers will be because of the population explosion in the area. Catanzaro then unveiled a preliminary plan for reorganization of the college administration aimed at saving the institution $225,000 over the next two years. The ultimate goal of the plan will be to eliminate vice president and assistant superintendent positions at the college, Catanzaro said. While several positions will be eliminated, Catanzaro indicated some new positions would be created, including a comptroller in the business services department and an assistant to the superintendent-president.

He said the effect of the plan will be to eliminate one layer of management for "cleaner, crisper" functioning at the administrative level. He also pointed out faculty members would have direct contact with the administration under the new plan. The plan will be divided into two parts: a district organization and a college organization, he said. Catanzaro said the college should be run along the lines of a business corporation. Board member Kenneth Ketner said he was "excited" about saving money under the new plan. Catanzaro added it will also increase administrative effectiveness. Dr. Stroh, however, asked why Catanzaro decided to proceed with the reorganization considering his appointment as superintendent-president was only a temporary, one-year position. Catanzaro responded, saying there are problems, such as the $300,000 deficit in certificated salaries, that "require something be done. Stroh then asked if the present organization could come to grips with the problems. "No." Catanzaro said.

Women start aid program for widows

Widows Helping Widows was established last month and in addition to monthly meetings, also offers reachout help from 'care-givers,' a resource library and professional counseling.

The organization's newly published brochure states, "Becoming a Widow is, but with rare exception, a traumatic experience. You may feel lonely, afraid, lost and uncertain. The little things in life become almost intolerable; the car won't start, the drain's backed up, the front door squeaks

"But life doesn't have to stay that way," the brochure continues.

"There is someone who knows how you feel and cares about you: another widow.

This is the basis of the Widows Helping Widows program, which is a non-profit, non-sectarian volunteer association of widows, dedicated to helping each other to help themselves. For more information on any of the organization's services, call 985-0513:

Services and resources are available at no cost. In the reach-out program, contact is made with recently widowed persons through the local funeral homes. Then, a trained widow "care-giver" makes herself available to help. "Care-givers" currently are being trained and will start in about 10 days on a one-to-one basis contacting new widows. In addition to being available at the regular monthly meetings, arrangements can be made to visit with a professional counselor on a one-to-one basis. Both the Euclid Pastoral Counseling Center and the West End Family Counseling Service offer staffs of professional counselors for those who desire this service. Committee members of the group are: Marie Brant, Terry Gullo, Martha Henley, Jean Neault, Freda Rausin, Dorothy Roberson, Mary Siders, Emmie Smith and Betty Stark.

Advisers are: Dr. Ralph Click, Bob Stevenson and Terri Mau, all with the Euclid Pastoral Counseling Center; Jim Draper with Draper Mortuary, Ontario; and the late Mr. Bayne Bybee of the West End Family Counseling Service, who was a founding adviser.

Candidates for county supervisor collect funds

By PETER WONG

With the June 6 primary only a few weeks away, Supervisor Joseph Kamansky of Upland has built up a sizable treasury in his campaign for a full four-year term and is continuing to add to it.

But one of his opponents, Cal McElwain, is also collecting thousands of dollars. He has committed nearly $10,000 to the services of a professional campaign consultant he hopes will help him overcome Kamansky's numerous advantages as an incumbent.

A third candidate, attorney Robert O'Connor of Cucamonga, has collected $1,005 and spent $881 on his

The three candidates for county supervisor in the Second District filed their first campaign statements this week with the registrar of voters in San Bernardino.

The statements list candidates' contributions and spending from Jan. 1 through April 23. Two more statements will be required, one just before the primary and one

The district includes Upland, Rancho Cucamonga and the northern parts of Ontario and Fontana. If no candidate wins a majority in the primary, the two top finishers will face each other Nov. 7.

Meanwhile, Kamansky's colleague, Chairman Robert O.

Townsend's re-election bid is challenged only by the write-in candidacy of Montclair Councilman Nelson Gentry - and Gentry has to wait until Nov. 7.

In its latest statement, Kamansky's campaign committee said it had $16,350.70 on hand as of April 23, up from $13,589.41 at the end of last year.

From Jan. 1 to April 23, Kamansky's campaign committee reported contributions of $7,887, $3,-055 of which came in amounts of $50 or greater.

Among the top contributors in this period were Jack Firestone of Jade California Edison officers and employees group, $400; John D. Lusk and Son, Orange County builder, $250; Joe Borba of Chino and Case Van Der Eyk of Corona, dairy operators, $250 each; and Vernola Ranch in Mira Loma, a dairy,

In its statement, McElwain's campaign committee disclosed it had only $1,954.02 on hand as of April 23. It started the year with $1,000.

During the four-month period, the committee reported contributions of $8,463, $7,380 of which came in amounts of $50 or greater.

Among the largest contributors in this period were Dr. I. M. Feldamp of Riverside and Chet Wilkin of Ontario, $500 each, and Joe Rodriguez of Fontana, $280.

McElwain, a metallurgist and union leader at Kaiser Steel Corp. in Fontana, also received contributions from unions and Kaiser Steel employees. Those groups accounted for 34 percent of his identifiable contributions

Firefighters' unions in Ontario, San Bernardino and the Central Valley contributed a total of $1,035. Local 2869 of the United Steelworkers of America added $450. Two executives of the union which represents most Kaiser employees gave another $200

Individual Kaiser Steel employees contributed $830 (Rodriguez's money is included in the total).

McElwain's largest single source of contributions was from individuals, some of whom were not identified completely by their oc-

The individuals accounted for $2,-400 in contributions, or 32.5 percent. Of McElwain's $7,558.98 in spending during this period, $6,035.45 was paid to Lloyd's Prevision Business Communications, a Del Mar firm which is serving as

Pronation Calls For Doctor's Help

Pronation, weakfoot and flatfoot are weightbearing situations that are very common.

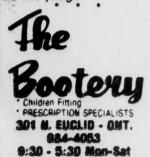

Naturally, they concern the parent because the feet and the ankles "just don't look right." Symptoms most com-monly noted in the gen-eral classification are such things as the ankles and heels tilting in and the toes tilting out. The arch may tend to sag in many cases, giving that flatfoot look.

The only advice that should be given to a parent when any of these symptoms appear is to get professional analy-

In one situation, there may be the symptoms and there is nothing particularly wrong - the child could go through life without any loss of effectiveness or without having any pain or discomfort.

On the other hand, the problem could be serious and give the child considerable trouble if not caught early.

If there is any reason for you to be suspicious of a weight-bearing foot problem, let your doctor be the judge.

examine the data published by the Internal Revenue Service.

You learn that taxpayers in the bottom 50 percent, by income, pay only 7 percent of the personal income tax, while those in the top 50 percent pay 93 percent.

Is this a fluke caused by heavy taxes on the lowmiddle group? No. The highest 25 percent pays 72 percent of the tax. The highest 10 percent pays almost half - 49 percent. And the highest 1 percent pays 19 percent. This hardly sounds like soaking the poor for the benefit of the rich.

Furthermore, he says, if you counted untaxed aid to the "poor." such as food stamps, housing subsidies, and other forms of welfare, are itemized deductions," you would find that "their real income exceeds that of many taxpayers.

Tax "cuts" to "help the poor" are popular with the government for two reasons, he says. First, because the poor don't pay any taxes, so it costs the government nothing. And second, because inflation soon moves people out of the lower brackets and into the range where they do owe taxes.

What about those famous loopholes" that are said to allow the rich to avoid paying their fair share? Fringe benefits are a larger percentage of a $15,000 salary than they are of a $100,000 salary, and so

Roberts points out. Deductions are the primary income shelter for those in the middle to lower tax brackets, where most of the income is," he says. And that is why the government wants to eliminate the deductions, so it can get its greedy hands on more of your money.

The greatest loophole of system," Roberts says, works for the benefit of government to use inflation to increase taxes on constant and even declining levels of purchasing power employees to run them. without having to legislate higher tax rates

Over the last 10 years, large enough to compensate wages have just kept even for inflation plus the push into higher brackets would help temporarily. Another because "the government's possible solution being discussed is "indexing" the tax code for inflation, so taxes remain the same on the same purchasing power, Still another is a constitutional limit on the total amount of national income that may be taken by the government.

These alternatives are worth a lot of thought and discussion. One thing I canguarantee you: If we don't save ourselves, no one else will do it for us.

Richter's tongue - in belief that people living on about earthquakes.

California is perched on the edge of the Pacific Ocean tectonic plate, one of the gigantic islands of the earth's outer crust which and is considered to be one of the most earthquake prone regions in the world.

Last year more than 1,000 quakes of magnitude "one" or greater were recorded in California, but only 20 were strong enough to feel magnitude "three" or greater.

Ninety percent of the people who die in earthquakes are killed by collapsing structures. Richter claims the potential for a huge number of fatalities now exists and estimates there are 40,000 dangerous buildings in Los Angeles alone.

Recognizing earthquakes as a national problem, congress in 1977 enacted the Earthquake Hazards Reduction Act, authored by California Senator Alan Cranston. Cranston says the act will permit us to "push rapidly ahead on research that should one day enable us to predict accurately where and when an earthquake will occur. The hope is that an early warning system will drastically reduce casualties.

Humane association trains dogs to aid deaf adults

By Robert L. Stear, D.V.M. Manager of Veterinary

A knock on the door, a crying child, a ringing alarm clock. All minor incidents for those who hear. All major obstacles for a deaf person.

Taking a cue from Seeing Eve Inc., the American Humane Association is attempting to do something about this situation by training dogs to serve as guides for deaf Americans.

The dogs- for- the- deaf program began in 1973 the auspices of the Minnesota Humane Society after an elderly deaf woman requested a replacement for a dog she had trained to respond to sounds FISHING - While some anglers are heading to the Eastern Sierra lakes for trout season, others are stopping at Glen Helen Regional Park in San Bernardino County's Devore Canyon. Visitors can fish, sail, visit a natural marsh area, and picnic. For information call the regional parks office, (714) 383-1912.

Sierra lakes beckon anglers

Don't fret if you missed the 1978 Eastern Sierra trout opener this past weekend. The remainder of the season should be very productive, and you will have missed sharing the roads, streams and lakes with 50,000 other anglers.

Fifty thousand anglers? The estimate comes from E.C. 'Charlie" Fullerton, director of the California Department of Fish and Game, who Saturday toured traditional fishing hot spots from Bishop north to Twin Lakes near Bridgeport.

The prediction of a very productive season comes from William Richardson, DFG regional fisheries supervisor. Richardson cites excellent water conditions, the flooding of new land which will provide trout food, especially at Bridgeport Lake and Lake Crowley, and DFG hatcheries bulging with

If you were one of the thousands who shared the trout opener this past weekend, you will have memories of one of the best trout openers on record. Your memories may be of Lake

Crowley, king of the trout waters, where 10,065 anglers - 5,565 of them aboard 1,590 boats - turned out Saturday to take 45,000 trout averaging 12 inches in length and three-quarters of a pound.

If you were Gene Johnson of Sepulveda and his fishing partner Elmer Mettler of Los Angeles, your memories will be of a 24-inch-long 6pound 5-ounce German brown trout that won Johnson the Mel Morrison Memorial Trophy awarded by the Los Angeles City Recreation and Parks Department for the largest trout taken at Crowley on opening weekend.

"I shook for half an hour afterward," recalls Mettler, who netted the brown of the water after Johnson tricked it into biting a roostertail lure near the Long Valley Dam.

"The best crew I ever had," said Johnson, grinning at Metter, "I have been coming up here since 1948 or

And that remark just about sums up the meaning of Crowley to thousands of anglers from Los Angeles to San Francisco. It's a long anticipated fishing trip, it's a social phenomenon, it's a tradition.

For Raymond Ross, 7, of Azusa, it was the beginning of a tradition. He shivered in the 32 degree weather at the 4:45 a.m. opening flare, then proudly brought in four nice rainbows while fishing with his father, Earl.

At Convict Lake, six miles to the north, another tradition was in the making. Michael Moran of Los Angeles, just a little over a year removed from his native Brisbane. Australia, had pulled in what appeared to be a three-pound

"It's my first time trout fishing...but bloody right, I am going to go fishing again," said Moran, who appeared to be as taken with the spectacular snow-clad mountains rising up around Convict as he was with the spectacular fishing that occurred there Saturday.

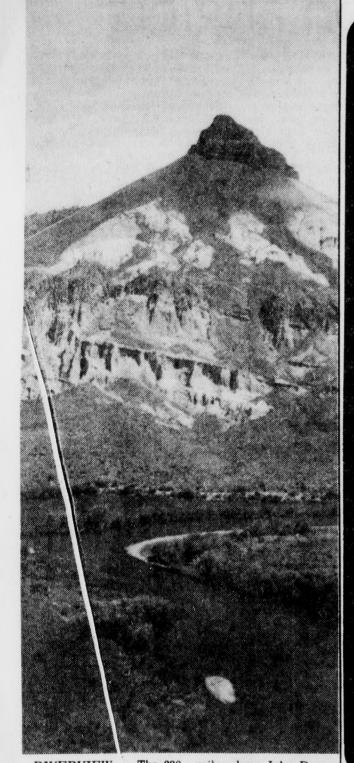

Later, he will hear of how Convict got its name, how six convicts hid there in 1871 after breaking out of Nevada State Prison in Carson City, how three of the convicts were captured after a gun battle in which the posse leader, William Morrison, was killed, how two of the convicts were hanged near Deadman's Summit, several miles to the north. Gloria Whitbeck took her memories home with her, back to canyon country, Los Angeles County. While fishermen teemed about her in the tiny dead-end canyon, she sat on a bridge over Convict Creek and sketched the mountains. Other memorable trout taken from the June Lake Loop included a seven-pound two-ounce brown by Bill Beckett of San Marcos; a fourpound seven-ounce rainbow on salmon eggs by Mike Stewart of Burbank at June Lake; and several large brook trout from the small unfrozen portions of Gull Lake at shoreline.

At Silver Lake Mark Lang, 14, of Glendora was reeling in memory after memory on garlic floating bait as his father Bob, Uncle Don, a brother Mike watched enviously. After all, they had helped break the ice so they could all fish at shoreline.

One of the newest national monuments in the country, the John Day Fossil Beds National Monument was commissioned by the National Park Service in 1974. It comprises, according to the National Automobile Club, nearly fifteen thousand acres of some of the world's most significant scientific resources.

John Day, a Virginian who came to Oregon in 1812 with the John Jacob Astor Fur Company Expedition, explored this region for several weeks while separated from the expedi-

But it was Thomas Condon, pioneer minister of The Dalles, Oregon, who became the first authority on the fossil beds. As early as the 1860s, Condon alerted scientists in the United States and abroad to the rich fossil record of the region. The State of Oregon established many state parks in the John Day River region over the years and these were all united into the national monument.

The sparsely populated John Day River region is a land of earthquake faults. Hidden in the folds of the rocks are fossilized dates, figs, peanuts, and eucalyptus leaves, which show that this high desert country was once a rain forest.

Fossilized bones found in the region form a picture of elephant-sized rhinoceroses and twelve-inch-high horses with three toes per foot wildlife refuge, pret the outstanding features of each area of the national monument. The headquarters, a good starting point for your visit, are located at John Day. The national monument consists of three widely separate mountain formations in Wheeler and Grant coun-

The Sheep Rock formation lies five miles west of Dayville off U.S. Highway 26. The mountains, according to NAC, include many unique geologic beds that are sharply tilted and eroded into picturesque forms.

The Painted Hills formation, located six miles along a marked country road that leaves U.S. Highway 26 near Mitchell, displays a beautifully eroded landscape of buff and red layers of rock and old lava

The Clarno formation is located off State Highway 218, ten miles south of the city of Fossil. The mountains consist of hills and bluffs that break forth in towering palisades and pinnacles of light-to-darkbrown rock. It is truly the most spectacular of all the regions in the national monument.

Camping in the John Day Fossil Beds National Monument is very limited. No digging or collecting of fossil materials is allowed. The national monument is a

'The lettuce?" I asked suspiciously, wondering whether Robinson was due for an extended vacation.

'Sure. The lettuce. The supermarket's got some lettuce over there for 98 cents a head.'

I was immediately alert. Those must be some great heads of lettuce," I said. "What did they grow them with? A special fertilizer? Special soil? A new kind of greenouse? Was it a major breakthrough in genetic development?

'Nah. It was none of that stuff. They've grown it just like they've always grown it. Same things as what they used to grow the 49 - cent lettuce last season.'

Then, why is this lettuce different from all other lttuces? Why does it cost twice what it used to?"

"Weren't you listening?" Robinson asked, annoyed. "I just told you that this lettuce is just like all the other lettuces. Exact same thing.

'But if it's the exact same lettuce, why did they price it at 98 cents a head instead of 49 or 59?'

Robinson sighed deeply, then tried to explain. "Do you remember the drought we had in California the past couple years?"

Any indication there may be another way, or that we are quite wrong in our approach, is reacted to with anger and self - justifying defensiveness. We become closed and never see there is another point of view.

The times in which we live are exciting and challenging. There is much work to be done in the world. And our world is much, much smaller than ever before.

There is a great information overload, and we must pick our way, as if in a maze, very carefully if we are to set appropriate priorities.

Think of the great challenge there is in the effort associated with bringing along the Third World, so that more of the world's people can benefit from good food, good jobs, and more satisfactory family life. We are still in the infancy of our struggle to learn how to live at peace with one another.

So, new insights into problem solving are needed. Creative solutions are possible, but it will mean rearranging our thinking patterns; it will mean opening ourselves up to new ideas; it will mean better understanding of the human ability to bend with the times and commit ourselves to having personal integrity. We can do it best if we are safe and secure in our selves.

'Fiesta chicken' is a winner

The lore of U.S. western history, the lure of western barbecues, stews and chilis, and the leisurely lifestyle of California provided the inspiration for Frank Just's "Fiesta Broiled Chicken," the winning recipe in this year's California Chicken-Cook-Off.

Frank's "Fiesta Broiled Chicken" gets its winning flavor from a unique marinade/basting sauce made with lemon juice, chili powder and cumin. This combination gives farm-fresh split chicken fryers a crispy texture and a decidedly southwestern flavor.

Whirl up the basting mixture in a blender and marinate the chicken for one hour, cavity side up. Broil for 25 minutes, basting frequently, and repeat on the other side until done

Fiesta Broiled Chicken Frank Just, Sacramento 3/4 cup lemon juice

1/4 cup corn oil 1 tablespoon salt

4 tablespoons red chili powder

2 teaspoons flavor enhancer 1 teaspoon cumin

1 teaspoon dry mustard

4 split fryer chickens

Place lemon juice, corn oil, salt, chili powder, flavor enhancer, cumin and mustard in blender container. Cover and whirl at medium speed 30 seconds. Brush the chicken with half of the misture and arrange, cavity side up, in a large shallow baking pan. Let stand 1 hour. Place skin side down on broiler rack. Broil at 450 degrees about 10 inches from heat for 25 minutes, basting with remaining mixture. Turn chicken and broil during the last part of cooking with skin side up, basting occasionally, and cooking about 30 minutes longer or until fork can be inserted with ease. Makes 4 servings.

Artichokes are the ultimate finger food

The ultimate finger food is an artichoke.

Think about it - isn't it fun to pull off a leaf, dip the fleshy end in sauce, pull it through your teeth? All over America, people are discovering artichokes: in restaurants where they can be ordered as a special vegetable treat; at hotel banquets where artichokes are often stuffed elegantly with seafood; and in the homes of friends where chicken sauteed with artichokes or roasted lamb with artichokes are apt to be family specialties.

The appeal of this vegetable with a nutlike flavor is reaching not just sophisticated food lovers but also youngsters. Children are among the biggest artichoke fans - many a mother is delighted when she at last finds a vegetable that brings smiles and eagerness at the dinner Marinated and accented It has been said by more than one wit that there is with lemon, this farm- more left when one is finished with an artichoke than fresh chicken dish is full when one begins! That's because the many parts of the of surprises with its artichoke are so sleekly and compactly packaged by nature. To reach every bit of the succulent goodness one must understand artichoke anatomy. Don't be embarrassed if you're an artichoke novice. With these clear instructions, you can be dipping artichoke leaves, scarping away the choke, getting to the heart of the matter in no time at all!

The artichoke is really the immature flower bud of a thistle. If you look closely at the anatomy of an artichoke you'll see that outer leaves have small thorns, easily trimmed with scissors prior to cooking. Artichokes are a true "finger food." Once you've mastered the very simple technique of eating one you'll wonder why you waited so long to add artichokes to your menu.

Place a whole artichoke on a plate before each family member, supply melted butter or a favorite dipping sauce and guide novices into the simple art of artichoke

Pick off each leaf, dip in sauce, then scrape the delicate meat off leaves between the teeth ... children love it! Keep a plate handy for used leaves. Show each person, when he gets down to the inedible fuzzy choke, how to simply scrape off this thorny fiber with a spoon. The artichoke heart is now ready for enjoying. Cut the heart into bite-size pieces with a knife and fork, dip each favorite. Everyone will marvel at the deliciousness of the artichoke heart. It is tender, nutlike, a vegetable

"fillet" of pure flavor and taste appeal and all of the heart is edible If our Spring artichokes seems greener, plumper, prettier and more flavorful than ever, we have to bow to that elementary fact that farmers know: rain is good for growing things The rains early in 1978 did finally end California's two-year drought So happily, the crop is abundant, quality is high. The outlook is for ample attractive artichokes to meet high consumer demand

Sizes will vary from the smallest, ideal for marinating, skewer barbecuing, casseroles; medium for eating whole; to large, ideal size for stuffing as a lunch or dinner entree. Size does not indicate quality as large artichokes grow on the top of a central stem. Medium and small artichokes grow in the middle of the plant on side branches off the main stem, and tiny artichokes grow near the base of the plant. (No, they are not immature; they're fully grown, just peewee due to location on the artichoke plant).

When there is severe cold in Castroville, the area where almost all commercial artichokes are grown, the chill becomes a bonus for this unique vegetable. Cold weather produces bronze touched "winter kissed" artichokes, causing buds to mature more slowly, which enhances flavor. These "winter kissed" artichokes are in many markets now and will be featured in produce departments as the special quality vegetables that they truly are.

Artichokes have a very long life ... extra nice when one wishes to shop ahead. An artichoke will look and taste fresh for up to three weeks. Just do not wash before storing. Pop into a plastic bag or clear plastic wrap, seal airtight, and refrigerate. Wash, trim leaves and stem just before cooking

One little known fact that will interest many is the potassium richness of the artichoke. 1 medium artichoke contains about 210 mg. of potassium and is listed in potassium-rich food suggestions given to many patients.

ARE YOU OPERATING UNDER A FICTITIOUS BUSINESS NAME?

If you are, are you aware that the California Business and Professions Code requires you to do the following:

File a fictitious business name statement with the county clerk in the county where you have your principal place of business.

Have the statement published once a week for four weeks in a newspaper circulating in the area where you are doing business. File a new statement on or before December 31 of the fifth year after the year in which the original statement was filed.

The purpose of this statute is to allow the public to know the true identities of those with whom it has business dealings. Filing is also in your best interest since in the event of non-compliance you will be prevented from maintaining any action on an account or contract or with regard to any transaction that you have had while operating under you

You should consult with your attorney for further details regarding compliance.
